

MIE

HOME.AZCENTRAL.COM

ONLINE COVERAGE
See the coolest Cool Homes we've showcased, at coolhomes.azcentral.com

PHOTOS BY WES JOHNSON/THE ARIZONA REPUBLIC

Contributing to the room's personality are the artistic flair, including the curving outer walls of the shower and its interior magenta glass mosaic tiles, shiny chrome, rich colors and dressy adornments.

Scottsdale master bath has personality plus

By Sue Doerfler
THE ARIZONA REPUBLIC

Not every bathroom has a personality.

But Terri Rundle's remodeled master bath, with its magenta accents, repetitious curves and natural materials, exudes it.

A friend calls it "contemporary baroque" in style, and the Scottsdale resident couldn't agree more. The room has just the right amounts of shiny chrome whimsy to the tub and vanity faucets. Magenta glass mosaic tiles, with their underlying hints of purple, add drama to the interior walls of the snail shower, whose curving outer walls are made of glass block.

The undulating shape of the vanity, custom made of bird's-eye maple and black walnut, is sensual as well as practical. Wider at one end, it serves as a transition between the jetted tub and toilet room.

The towel bar is decorative as well as useful: Crafted of a bamboo pole, it's 5 feet wide, long enough so that towels dry quickly. Three sets of luxurious towels in alternating shades of magenta and pink are arranged on it. They mirror the shapes found in the painting of lipstick tubes, done by an artist named

Terri Rundle came up with the "contemporary baroque" design for her remodeled master bath.

Ozello, that hangs above the tub.

Rundle, who owns SOCA Gallery/Vircille in Old Town Scottsdale, came up with the design for the bathroom, which is open to the master bedroom. She enjoys the spaciousness of the room — the old bathroom was too narrow and confining — as well as its character, she said. It's the perfect place to pamper herself.

Fancy finials that spiral and twist add a playful and attention-getting touch to the faucets for the vanity and tub.

The undulating shape of the vanity, constructed of bird's-eye maple and black walnut, is as sensual as it is practical.

THE ARIZONA REPUBLIC

HO

Tips on helping your flowers survive summer. Southwest Gardens, HO17

Arizona Republic, HOME Section, March 31, 2007...BATH SPLASH: Scottsdale Master Bath Has Personality Plus...

Not every bathroom has a personality.

But Terri Rundle's remodeled master bath, with its magenta accents, repetitious curves and natural materials, exudes it.

A friend calls it "contemporary baroque" in style, and the Scottsdale resident couldn't agree more. The room has just the right amounts of shiny chrome, rich colors, dressy adornments and artistic flair.

Fancy finials that spiral and twist lend eye-catching whimsy to the tub and vanity faucets. Magenta glass mosaic tiles, with their underlying hints of purple, add drama to the interior walls of the snail shower, whose curving outer walls are made of glass block. The undulating shape of the vanity, custom made of bird's-eye maple and black walnut, is sensual as well as practical. Wider at one end, it serves as a transition between the jetted tub and toilet room.

The towel bar is decorative as well as useful: Crafted of a bamboo pole, it's 5 feet wide, long enough so that towels dry quickly. Three sets of luxurious towels in alternating shades of magenta and pink are arranged on it. They mirror the shapes found in the painting of lipstick tubes, done by an artist named Ozello, that hangs above the tub.

Rundle, who owns SOCA Gallery/Vircille in Old Town Scottsdale, came up with the design for the bathroom, which is open to the master bedroom. She enjoys the spaciousness of the room - the old bathroom was too narrow and confining - as well as its character, she said. It's the perfect place to pamper herself.